

Providing a Network of Financial Solutions

Walt Anderson, AIF®

Accredited Investment Fiduciary®

June 13, 2018

Dear Reader:

Happy Father's Day!

As you know, this special day isn't just a chance to buy Dad some new cologne or a power drill. It's an opportunity to reflect on what fathers mean to us. The things they've taught, the values they've instilled, the examples they've set.

It's a chance to look in the mirror and ask ourselves just how we're measuring up.

One of the greatest and most moving tributes I've ever read about fathers comes from none other than Teddy Roosevelt, Jr., the 26th president of the United States. Even today, the popular image of Roosevelt is that of a rough-riding boxer, a Bull Moose. He was a man who, after being shot in the chest at a rally, decided to finish his speech anyway.

But as a boy, Roosevelt was "sickly and timid," prone to asthma and bullying.

As Roosevelt would later describe it, the main reason for his transformation was his father, Theodore Sr.

My father, Theodore Roosevelt, was the best man I ever knew. He combines strength and courage with gentleness, and great unselfishness. He would not tolerate in us children selfishness or cruelty, idleness, cowardice, or untruthfulness. As we grew older, he made us understand that the same standard of clean living was demanded of the boys as well as the girls; that what was wrong in a woman could not be right in a man. With great love and patience, and the most generous sympathy and consideration, he combined insistence on discipline. I never knew anyone who got greater joy out of living than did my father, or anyone who more whole-heartedly performed every duty.¹

I was fortunate in having a father whom I have always been able to regard as the ideal man. It sounds a little like cant to say what I am going to say, but he did combine the strength and courage and will and energy of the strongest man with tenderness, cleanness, and purity. I was a sickly and timid boy. He not only took great and untiring care of me—some of my earliest remembrances are of nights when he would walk up and down with me for an hour at a time in his arms when I was a wretched mite suffering acutely with asthma—but he also most wisely refused to coddle me and made me feel that I must force myself to hold my own with other boys and prepare to do the rough work of the world. I would have hated and dreaded beyond measure to have him know that I had been guilty of a lie, or of cruelty, or of bullying, or of uncleanness or cowardice.

Gradually I grew up to have these feelings on my own account, not merely his.²

In some ways, I think that last line was the most profound of all. You see, most children lucky enough to have a good father grow up idolizing their dad. He's a pillar of strength, a font of wisdom. He's a hero and a wizard, a teacher and a coach. As we grow up, though, we start to see that nobody's perfect, not even Dad-and it's easy to focus more on avoiding his mistakes or perfecting his shortcomings than following his example.

But then, as we grow older still, we learn we're not perfect, either. We realize the only reason we avoided Dad's mistakes was because he taught us how. We realize that most of what we take pride in, most of what we value-it came from him.

That, to me, is what Father's Day is all about. It's about more than gifts and cards. It's about more than simply saying "Thank you."

It's about saying, "I wouldn't be who I am today without you."

Whether out loud at a family gathering, or in the quiet of our own hearts, I hope we all take the time to pay tribute to our dads this upcoming Father's Day. And from all of us here at Anderson Financial Network, I wish to say, "Thank You" to all fathers reading this. We wouldn't be who we are without you.

Please do not hesitate to call me with any questions or comments at (502) 228-3900 or via email walt@wwafn.com.

Referrals are always accepted and appreciated.

Sincerely,

W. Walter Anderson, AIF®
Accredited Investment Fiduciary

¹ Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., "Theodore Roosevelt: An Autobiography," 1913 <http://www.bartleby.com/55/1.html>

² Joseph Bucklin Bishop, "Theodore Roosevelt and His Time Shown in His Own Letters – Book 1," <http://bit.ly/2.JgnSec>

Address: 10515 Meeting Street, Suite 105 | Prospect, KY 40059

Tel: 502.228.3900 | 866.320.4364 | Fax: 502.228.3400

E-mail: walt@wwafn.com

Website: www.wwafn.com

Securities and Advisory Services offered through Commonwealth Financial Network, Member FINRA/SIPC, a Registered Investment Advisor. Fixed insurance products and services offered by Anderson Financial Network or CES Insurance Agency.